

“Even if animal research
resulted in a cure for AIDS,
we’d be against it.”

- Ingrid Newkirk, President
People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals
USA Today

VS.

PETA Favors Lab Rats Over Sick Kids

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals is against all medical research that uses animals—even though animal research has helped practically every medical breakthrough, from AIDS drugs to polio eradication. PETA is also against consumers being free to buy a fur coat, own a pet, or visit a zoo.

But don't mistakenly think PETA cares all that much for animals, either:

Last year PETA killed 1,809 cats and dogs at its headquarters, according to public records.

Learn more about PETA's extremist agenda at

PETA Kills Animals.com